While there are not many letters suggesting their writers have emotional or psychiatric problems, I generally answer the first in the belief it may make the writers not feel ignored and hurt again.

Dear Mrs. Louise Kephart,

I stay pretty busy with the work that, as you put it, has the purpose of taking the truth to the nation.

Whether or not I could undertake any other work at this time is doubtful.

Until I read what you have in mind I also have no way of knowing.

And, of course, what documentation you have.

If you are familiar with my writing, you know I do not offer mere opinion.

You say, "J. Edgar Hoover told me..." If he did this in a letter, that letter would be a kind of documentation.

So, while I cannot say I would be able to do anything with it, if you would like to "write the whole story" I will tell you whether I can do anything with it.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
